To Support Dollar

U.S. to Auction Gold On a Monthly Basis

(WP)—In a new step to shore up the dollar and reduce the troublesome U.S. trade deficit, the Treasury Department last night an-nounced it will auction gold on a regular monthly basis beginning

Treasury spokesman Joseph Lai-tin made the announcement after the close of U.S. markets on the Initially, for a series of six auc-tions of 300,000 ounces monthly running through October, the sales will be made for dollars to U.S. citizens or foreigners. However, the Treasury said sales will not knowingly be made to, or on behalf of. foreign governments or central banks. For monthly auctions beginning in November, the Treasury said it will consider the sale of gold for Deutsche marks, and may also alter the monthly sales volume.

Officials said the move—which came as something of a surprise be-cause the dollar lately stabilized in foreign exchange markets had two objectives:

 To reduce the trade deficit "eiframes by increasing the export of gold or reducing the imports of that commodity."

• To further the U.S. desire to islation continue progress toward the elimination of the international monetary role of gold." The last Treasury sales of gold, it if whe: in 1975, were also part of an effort.

WASHINGTON, April 20 to reduce the monetary significance

But the sale of gold would also soak up excess dollars, to the extent that foreigners purchase the preci-ous metal, Mr. Laitin said. The po-tential later sale of gold for Deutsche marks would provide the United States with an additional supply of foreign currency with which to intervene in the markets to prop up the dollar.

However, the statement did oot indicate a change in U.S. policy to intervene in markets only to prevent "disorderly" conditions. The Treasury has stood firm against a massive intervention policy, or the suggestion it "peg" a specific price or zone for the dollar and defend it at any cost.

With 277.5 million ounces at Fort Knox, the U.S. gold supply would last 77 years selling 300,000 ounces monthly. At the current market level of about $175 an ounce, each moothly sale would yield about $52.5 million or $630 million a year.

million a year.

European officals have been urging the Treasury to sell gold for foreign currencies as one way to stem the dollar slide that continued for most of 1977 and early 1978. A sale of gold for marks, Swiss francs, or other strong currencies provides re-sources with which to defend the dollar when its price drops in world

On the House side, the legislation is still in committee, with the most recent version of the bill leaning toward a different means to iotroduce reforms. Its. key feature would be a "sunset" provision that at some point in the future would eliminate the Civil Aeronautics Board altogether, thus introducing a regulation-free climate.

Terrorist Note Says Moro Is Still Alive

ROME. April 20 (UPI)—Red Brigade terrorists today produced a photograph that they said proved that Aldo Moro, the kidnapped former premier, was still alive. But they said he would be executed within 48 hours if the government refused to release their jailed comrades.

The photograph, sent to the Rome newspaper Il Messaggero along with a new communique, showed the president of the ruling Christian Democratic party holding a newspaper dated yesterday, one day after a communique which one day after a communique, which they denounced as false, said that he had already been executed.

A reporter from the oewspaper found the photograph and the com-munique on directions from an anooymous caller, the technique the Red Brigades used in releasing previous communiques, three let-ters by Mr. Moro and an earlier snapshot. As in previous cases, copies of the statement were also found in Milan, Turin and Genoa.

In today's communique, the group said that its ultimatum would run out at 3 p.m. on Saturday. Anti-terrorist investigators said that they considered the new communique authentic.

Shepherd's Body Found

Police had been searching Lake Duchessa, northeast of Rome, for Mr. Moro's body after receiving a purported Red Brigades message that said his body had been dumped there. Today they reported finding a body near the lake, it was identified as that of a shepherd who had been missing from his nearby village for five days.

Carrillo Goals Applauded At Spain Party Meeting

MADRID, April 20 (AP)-Spanish Communist militants today fell into line behind the campaign of party leader Santiago Carrillo to nail down ideological freedom from the Soviet Union and to create an image of moderation in time for the next elections.

Debating a Carrillo resolution to drop Soviet Leninism from its official definition, most speakers at the Communist party's first national convention at home in 46 years backed, or at least did not protest, the secretary-general's proposal, Backers of Mr. Carrillo predicted that the formal declaration of inde-pendence from Moscow would be approved overwhelmingly and that Mr. Carrillo would be re-elected as party leader despite the most serious dissent within the party since the Soviet invasion of Czechsolo-vakia in 1968. A warning from Moscow to stick with Leninist theory appeared lost in the verbage,

Mr. Carrillo was expected to use his party's backing to promote a moderate Eurocommunist image before the municipal elections scheduled for later this year and to stress Spanish Communist cooperation with the post-Franco government of Centrisi Premier Adolfo Suarez.

Socialist Votes Sought

High party officials indicated that Mr. Carrillo might also try to move the party to the left to capture some votes won hy the Socialists in last year's parliamentary elections.

A vote on Mr. Carrillo's proposal to have the party defined as Marxist, democratic and revolutionary - but not Leninist - was expected late tomorrow or Saturday.

One heavily applauded speech was made by a delegate from the Canary slands, where Mr. Suarez today began an official six-day visit. Addressing Cuban observers, Constantino Gonzalez warned that attempts in Africa to promote a liberation movement in the Canary Islands "will drive us into the arms of NATO."

General Amnesty in Chile Erases 'Security' Crimes

By David F. Belnap

"Literally thousands of persons are affected by the decree," the leader said. "It's an original and creative measure. There's been talk about a general amnesty, but I didn't expect it to go this far."

The amnesty was announced without fanfare by publication of the text of the official decree in vesterday's edition of Diario Official, the official gazette. It was signed by all four members of Chile's ruling junta, and its publi-cation in the Diario means it became effective yesterday.

Specifically, the decree provides: Amnesty for all persons convicted of any crimes by military tri-bunals between Sept. 11, 1973, and in the civil courts. Exempted from the amnesty are persons who may have committed certain specified serious common crimes during the state of siege but who have not yet been apprehended or charged. why couldn't Mr. Carter keep State Department officials from leaking stories critical of the White House adviser?

Mr. Carter's reply, officials on the presidential plane report, was that 7,000 persons worked at the State Department and that it was impossible to keep an eye on all of ting their stories from the janitors there," Mr. Brzezinski is said to have retorted.

According to several officials, this exchange is typical of the cool-ness that has crept into relations between the State Department and the National Security Council during recent weeks.

Reasons for Tension

In part, officials attribute the tension to "hureaucratic misunder-standings" and pressures created hy criticism — at home and abroad of the administration's performance on foreign policy. But some officials argue that at the core of the disagreements is the question of how best to insure smooth relations with Russia and achieve a new arms agreement that would win the approval of Congress.

A high-ranking State Department official described the basic ment orticial described the basic disagreement this way. "Zbig be-lieves that only by displaying back-bone can the administration achieve its goals with Moscow. But most people around bere think that tough talk and a threatening posture could ruin the chances for working out a more stable relationship with the Soviets."

The disagreements became evident early in March when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Mr. Brzezinski appeared to differ over the consequences for arms negoti-tions of the continued Soviet military involvement in Africa. Since then, there have been disputes over a presidential address on defense policy and over the handling of the neutron-weapon issue. The differences became more visible as Mr. Vance moved on to Moscow for a series of talks on achieving a new strategic arms agreement. At the White House, officials indicated that they did not expect the Vance mission to accom-

Mr. Brzezinski emphasized in an interview that he remained on good terms with Mr. Vance and denied that they were at odds over policy toward the Soviet Union. "Both on the fundamentals of American-Sovict relations as well as the factics. there is no disagreement between Cy and myself."

White House officials appear particularly upset over State De-partment actions surrounding a neech on defense delivered by President Carter at Wake Forest University on March 17. The onversity on March 17. The speech, written by a Brzezinski aide. Samuel Huntington, was meant, officials said, to provide a clear signal to the Soviet Union that its continued military buildup could jeopardize future U.S.-Soviet economic and technical cooperation.

However, they said that the effect of the speech may have been diluted when Marshall Shulman, a State Department adviser on Soviet affairs, received Mr. Vance's permission to telephone an official in the Soviet Embassy stressing that the complete text of the speech be called to Moscow so that Soviet leaders could read the conciliatory portions.

"How do you think the Soviets interpreted the call?" said a White House official. "I'm sure they took it to mean that they need not take the President's statements serious-

According to South Korea's Constitution, which Mr. Park rewrote under martial law in 1972. this nation's voters are scheduled to vote this spring to elect 2,583 mem-bers of the National Council for Unification.

Later this year the council will elect a president for a six-year term. Mr. Park will be the only candidate. The opposition forces are not offering a candidate because the Constitution prohibits criticism of Mr. Park.

Then early oext year the council will "elect" 73 men and women to the National Assembly. That slate will be nominated by the council's presideot, who is Mr. Park.

To back up his government's stern line toward criticism (oppooents can be jailed seven years for criticizing the government to a foreigner). Mr. Park issued a warning last mooth that he would not tolerate a political situation that damages "national unity and social stability." During the last 6 of his 15 years in office, Mr. Park has maintained that criticism and political divisions can be misunderstood by the Communists and possibly iovite an attack from North Korea.

Constitution Rewritten

Mr. Park, 60, a former general, led a 1961 coup that overthrew a politically fractious civilian government led by John Chang. After winning a 1963 election, Mr. Park rewrote the Constitution to limit a president to two terms. He amended this to three terms in 1970 and dropped the limit in a 1972 consti tutional rewrite.

On paper, South Korea's election system, like many institutions under Mr. Park, appears to be democratic. In operation, however, there is no hope of success for the opposition forces. The opposition New Democratic party, under the leadership of Lee one reading. "For sale very cheap, Chul Seung, has decided not to of- 22 white mice."

Mexico Drops Request for U.S. Fighter Planes

WASHINGTON, April 20 (WP)—In a move relieving the Carter administration of a seositive foreign policy decision, Mexico has dropped its bid to buy 26 U.S. F-5 fighter planes worth $150 million.

Mexico's request, made late last year, triggered a behind-the-scenes debate within the U.S. national security community because it in-volved two conflicting policy goals. Selling the planes would have run counter to President Carter's policy of reduciog foreign military sales. But rejecting the request would have offended the Mexican government at a time when Mr. Carter is seeking increased Mexican cooperation in combatting drug traffic and the flow of illegal Reliable sources said that Mexico hacked away from the deal because press disclosure of the request had stirred domestic opposi-tion. Critics have said that Mexico, which is struggling with severe internal ecocomic problems, cannot afford the planes.

Cheaper by the Litter

LONDON, April 20 (UPI)-The Daily Telegraph said today a sign in a Birmingham shop window say-ing, "For sale cheap, 10 white mice" now has been replaced with suspeoded prisoo sentence for demanding a return to democracy.

According to Mr. Park's latest Constitution, the 16 million voters will elect unification council mem-bers this spring, probably next month, Other than "electing" a president and ratifying his partia-mentary appointments, the council has no function. In local districts, however, the members accrue considerable prestige in this Confucian society. They also get special passports and cannot be arrested without the attorney geoeral's specific permissioo.

No Party Affiliations

Council candidates must oot have any political party affiliations, an interpretation left for officials of Mr. Park's government to make. The result is a couocil entirely supportive of Mr. Park; in December, 1972, when the council, presided over by Mr. Park, "recommended" its presideoual choice of Mr. Park, it gave him 99.9 per cent of the

In the election of 73 members of the National Assembly, the largest single bloc in the rubber-stamp legislature, the council has never rejected a candidate nominated by

Mr. Park. Voters elect the remaining 146 seembly members from local districts. The President's supporters in this group plus those ratified by the council give him clear control of the assembly. Opposition members who manage to be elected can have difficulties. One. a lawyer named Kim In Ki. was arrested recently on charges of tax evasion, ao alle-gation that appears to be leveled often at government critics.

The arrest was widely interpreted as a warning to anti-Park forces to keep their opposition statements to a minimum. Mr. Park has not yet formally announced his intention to seek a fifth term to lead this rapidly devel-oping nation of 36 million. The assumption by everyone here is that he will; he has permitted no heir apparent to develop, But jo line with the democratic approach be seeks to convey, Mr. Park, when asked recently if he will run again, replied: "I would just like to say that the matter will be decided by a majority of the people."

Mr. Chhang advocated an international conference on the subject as a way to bring outside pressure on Cambodia's leaders.

Nigeria Tightens Budget As Oil Revenue Dries Up

By David B. Ottaway

ia, the only black African country to strike it rich in oil, is discovering that it is being out-priced on the sluggish market and is facing sharp competition from the North Sea and Alaska. Nigeria's once prized low-sulfur oil is no longer in such demand and production has dropped from more than 2 million barrels a day last year to 1.6 million in February.

Estimates of the resulting drop in government revenue vary between 20 and 40 per cent. Last year's earnings of more than $9 billion made Nigeria by far the richest black African nation.

Heavy dependence on the U.S. market has further weakened Nigeria's financial situation because of the dollar's fluctuating val-ue. Nigeria lost about $140 million last year and is losing $200,000 to $300,000 a day because of the weakening dollar, according to Western economists here.

Tough Budget Speech

As President Carter was traveling to Lagos for his state visit late last month, the Nigerian chief of state. Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasa was delivering a budget speech in which he announced a 10-per-cent cut in government expenditures and new hardships for individual Nigerians. Imports of such items as fresh meat, sugar, spaghetti, beer and breakfast cereal were banned. Duties were increased by up to 100 per cent on such things as cars, cosmetics, and luxury goods.
Gen. Obasanjo had harsh words for Nigerians who had been mak-

Nigeri-ans must stop believing and behav-ing as if we are a member of the club of developed nations." He added that Nigeria, with a popula-tion of at least 80 million, is impoverished when per-capita income is calculated ($325 last year). The point of his budget message was that development in both the capitalist West and socialist East had required hard work and sacri-fice: "We must get out of the illn-sion of wanting to be like Europe or America without making the

The general announced a drive to reduce dependence on oil revenue, which provides 80 per cent of gov-ernment income. He said that heavy emphasis would be placed on the development of agriculture and industry. Most of the $8.6 billion approved for capital expenditures in the next fiscal year will go to these neglected sectors, he said.

Development Criticized

The idea that the country might be running ont of oil money must have shocked most Nigerians afer watching skyscrapers rise like mushrooms in Lagos and highways open across the country.

But a shock is what Nigeria needs in its random approach to development, according to Western economists. They calculate that the 1975-1980 national development plan probably will cost twice the original estimate of $53 billion because of inflation and inaccurate cost projections. *

Economists suddenly realized that commitments for capital projects were more than three times the money available. This has led Nieria to arrange a $1-billion Eurodollar loan, the largest floated for a black African country, and to plan for several more large loan requests

Despite the scare, Nigeria is not on the verge of bankruptcy. Its for-eign exchange holdings are more than $3 billion, a huge amount by black African standards, and its credit rating with Western banks is excellent. Known oil reserves should last 20 yers or more and there is believed to be much more.

Grigorenko Gets Asylum in U.S.

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP)— The U.S. Immigration and Natural-ization Service amounced yester-day that it has granted political asylum to Soviet dissident Pyotr Grigorenko, a former major general in the Soviet Army. Mr. Grigorenko, 70, applied for asylum Tuesday. Since he left the Soviet Union several months ago to undergo surgery here, the Soviet government had stripped him of citizenship, saying that his criticism of the Soviet Union had damaged its prestige.

Maurice Kiley, district director of the immigration service, said that Mr. Grigorenko's status is temporary and will be reviewed in

Southern African Deadlock

When Cyrus Vance left Africa this week, he departed with some concrete information and not without bope of a reasonable solution for the problems of the southern regions of that continent. But for the present, and so far as Rhodesia is concerned, there is only frustration so far as a general settlement is

This was to be expected. When white Rhodesians bolted the British Commonwealth for fear that their dominance would be overturned in Britain's movement away from the old colonialism, radicals of the right confronted all the rest-black moderates, black Marxists, reasonable whites and most of the world at large. Now Mr. Ian Smith bas moved far away from that position to attract moderate black nationalists into a transition government. But this leaves the armed black guerrilla groups in continuing confrontation, aided by Rhodesia's neighbor states and outside influence.

Among those influences must be included Great Britain and the United States-at least to the extent that these nations want the Patriotic Front to be included in any transition phase of Rhodesia's march to a Zimbabwe under majority rule. But the moderates who have rallied around Ian Smith fear the armed guerrillas, and the latter prefer a victory for themselves to a system which might well entail a triumph for a middle-of-the-road black majority.

All of this, of course, is complicated by white extremists who feel that Mr. Smith has sold them out as well as by tribal rivalries within Rhodesia and conflicting aims of nations surrounding that country. And it may also be complicated by the fact that the proposals of the U.S. secretary of state and British Foreign Minister David Owen are known as the Anglo-U.S. plan, which strikes a jarring note in discussions among Rhodesia's nationalists of all colors and idealogies.

It is not, therefore, surprising that Mr. Vance and Mr. Owen left southern Africa with little accomplished. What is hopeful about the prevailing deadlock is that doors have not been slammed in the face of compromise—they have, admittedly, been closed by most of the parties, but not latched. Therefore it is still possible to seek some means of avoiding continuing guerrilla war in Rhodesia and of ensuring that the inevitably rocky path to Zimbabwe will be made as smooth as possible. Perhaps the United States, which has been more prickly about the Ian Smith plan than Britain, will henceforth use a less stern tone on that subject and present the dilemma less in terms of an Anglo-U.S. plan against a Salisbury plan and more a means of adapting all plans to the common goal of peaceful transition.

Change in Chile

Chile's junta is ending some of the harshest aspects of its rule --- as evidenced by the decree this week of a general amnesty - and moving back cautiously toward a form of modified constitutionalism. Its sudden burst of cooperation with the U.S. inquiry into the Washington murders of the anti-junta figure Orlando Letelier and a colleague is particularly noteworthy. Given the notoriety of the regime and the ubiquity of rightist dictatorships, it is worth exploring what's behind the change,

Factor I would have to be the junta's success in consolidating its power. That has meant a brutal repression of its foes, a reshaping of the economy to favor people of property and their creditors, and a restoration of public tranquillity. The military leadinternationally useful, to allow the Chilean people's apparently irrepressible political spirit to start being expressed again. A kind of lively and increasingly obvious politics is going on inside the junta. It has worked for the cause of relaxation so far.

Factor 2 would be the particular combination of censure and tolerance that Chile has encountered on the international scene. Some part of the censure, the part coming from leftist authoritarian regimes, may have been dismissible as hypocrisy and propaganda. But fair-minded, nonideological criticism from traditional friends surely has had an effect. We wonder, however, whether the various forms of pressure would have worked if Chile did not also have available certain sources of outside help, especially private banks. Some opponents of the junta complain that Chile's access to private U.S. credit has undercut the United States' Carter-period policy of denying the Pinochet regime public loans. But the private money has helped provide the stability underlying recent liberalization.

The United States, which had a role in bringing on Chile's coup in 1973, has since had a role in steering the country back in the other direction. That is as it should be. Nothing can undo the human and political devastation to which this country has contributed, but it would be intolerable if the United States were still officially supporting the makers of the coup. At the same time, it is necessary to concede that putting Humpty Dumpty back together again is not a simple task. It takes more than good intent, It takes wise policy—and some luck. Since the junta sull has a long way to go, it seems sensible to stay with the same pressures, and openings, that are working now.

Moving Beyond the Canal

A few decades too late and a few reservations too heavy, the Panama treaties now stand approved. If avoiding an appalling failure is success—and in diplomacy it usually is-President Carter, the Senate and the people of the United States can feel pleased. We have given a small and oft-abused nation its due and spared ourselves all manner of predictable grief at the now marginally important canal and throughout the hemisphere. But we did it grudgingly, ineptly and, in the end, rudely; our reputation for magnanimity cannot survive many more such demonstrations of it.

So beware of new eras in the mouths of presidents. "These treaties can mark the beginning of a new era in our relations not only with Panama but with all the rest of the world," Carter was quick to proclaim. ("This was the week that changed the world," said Richard Nixon in Shanghai six years ago.) Presumably Carter's world also encompasses the Soviet Union and Saudi Arabia, Egypt and China, South Africa and West Germany. One just gesture to Panama will not cause those nations to judge the United States newly powerful or wise in relations with them. Nor will it persuade the poorer nations that the U.S. colossus stands unselfishly ready to sbare its wealth. What has ended in Panama is a vestigial kind of crude colonialism that Americans have usually opposed in the other hemisphere and fitfully in ours. The era that made us sovereign at the canal was long

What Carter really wanted to declare ended, we suspect, is the recent era of the enfecbled American presidency. Through a painful period of domestic rebellion and constitutional crisis over Vietnam and Watergate, the U.S. people and their Congress have circumscribed the diplomatic authority of the White House to a point where other nations doubt the value of its commitments and agreements. For some time now, a president plainly could not be counted on to deliver an energy policy, an economic stimulus, an arms control treaty, a shipment of arms or a relaxation of trade barriers. And so denied of muscle at home, be and our collective diplomacy have been cumulatively weakened Perversely, it was those Americans who say they most resent U.S. retreats and compromises abroad who managed to turn the Panama treaties into a critical test of their President's stature. Had they defeated him they would have enhanced the very tendency they deplore. And as the unfortunately large Republican vote against the treaties showed, their confusion of means and ends, in diplomacy and politics, is by no means cured.

Carter is right to hope for a new era of broadly shared U.S. purposes in our approach to the world. The Panama experience keeps that hope alive. But it showed too that formidable domestic interests lie in ambush along every foreign path. The time and terrain for the next engagement will need to be

Reappraising the U.S. Navy

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

W ASHINGTON—Far and away Jimmy Carter's most interesting defense policy is the number he's doing on the Navy. For his own reasons, he's doing what defense critics have for years (largely in vain) urged presidents to do to all the services; slow down arms-building plans and force an explanation of just what particular missions they mean to serve.

So far this process of putting the Navy, or the nonstrategic surfaceship part of it, through an internal bureaucratic and analytical wringer has drawn little attention outside the defense community. People see an argument over whether the Navy's 13th carrier should be a powered job costing $1 billion or less, and they hear the Navy establishment grouning that planners have halved its 1979-84 shipbuild-ing goals, and they figure—if they listen at all—that it's too inside-ish and technical to grasp. Moreover, the public actors do not yet include the heaviest hitters in town.

Technical

The fight is inside ish and technical, and it is in an early or middle round—a showdown is perhaps six months or a year away. But a wider circle ought to start plugging in. At stake is not merely the kind of Navy we'll have in 10, 20 and 30 years, a matter that might properly be thought to be of interest primabe thought to be of interest primarily, even parochially, to the Navy. The issue is also what military tools will be available to accomplish whatever political-military tasks the political leadership accepts or assigns: the essence of our world

And there is the money. Ships are the largest perennial cost item in the defense budget. Whether we spend $4-$5 billion or twice that every year for the next 20 and more—that's the range of choice— gets into very big bucks of an order dwarfing the most expensive imaginable new strategic programs.

The occasion for the current shipbuilding slowdown arose somewhat accidentally from the Navy's overruns, contract disputes, etc. Those problems had already provoked a fierce debate over the cow. The Soviet-U.S. arms-control shape of the Navy: the mix of ships circuit is nuclear, and it's already for the missions of sea control (guarding the lanes to Europe, for instance) and power projection (in-fluencing political decisions ashore in various corners of the world). A "balanced" Navy, or something for everybody, had tentatively come out of that debate. (Note that the Navy's strategic mission—subma-rine missiles aimed at the Soviet Union—is not at issue.)

Debate on Shape

The Carter administration seized upon the management scandal as one way to reopen the debate over the shape of the Navy: First get your house in order, the adminisiration said, and then come discuss the future. Then, through the National Security Council, the Office of Management and Budget and, at the cutting edge, the Defense De-partment Program Evaluation Of-fice, the administration encouraged a related debate over the size of the Navy: whether to build the current 459-ship flect toward 500 or 600 in the 1990s.

In the shape-and-size debates, much turns on the old abstruse defense issue of how much is enough. Since it's impossible to predict what contingencies will arise so far out on the horizon, the outcome may reflect as much hunches and adrenalin levels and bureaucrate tradeoffs and congressional pressures as formal analyses. As you might guess, the Navy is more imaginative about the contingencies it must meet, especially in the Gulf, and more alarmed by the Soviet Navy, than are those who'd scale it back.

Behind the how-much-is-enough question, bowever, is one a bit easier to get at, a question underlying challenges to naval power since World War II. Strategic subs aside, what is naval power but air power affoat? Cannot land-based planes in many circumstancs perform naval missions—projecting power ashore even guarding sea lanes more efficiently and reliably than planes flying off carriers? This seems to me a good place for the mismanagement of past ship plan-ning and shipbuilding: too many "gold-plated" high-cost ships, cost ably sbouldn't be, to try to hing It's not in the cards, and it probably shouldn't be, to try to hinge some part of the fleet-of-the-future decision on negotiations with Mos-cow. The Soviet-U.S. arms-control straining under the SALT load. The various talks touching conventional arms (Indian Ocean, forces in Europe, arms transfers) are at best steep uphill ventures. The naval decision is Washingtoo's own.

Piquancy

There's a certain piquancy in though, if only to keep a Navy-minded Congress from forcing his

Carter's williogness to reject the nuclear-carrier advice of his old mentor Adm. Hyman Rickover. But his views on the larger ques-tions aren't yet part of the public record, or available from his advisers. He's got more urgent matters on his national security agenda at the moment. Sooner or later, ing, beld last month in Cairo, to head conciliation effons aimed at facilitating an Arab summit—also slated for Khartoum.

But for all his pan-African and pan-Arab aspirations, Numeiri has quite a few worries at home. The enemies of his regime have an affinity for timing their coup attempts for the OAU summit; abortive bnt bloody coups were made in July in 1971 and 1976. And the growing presence of radical or ungrowing presence of radical or un-stable regimes on Sudan's borders adds little cause for comfort.

Rethink

Numeiri, who began to rethink his political orientation after the Communist-backed attempt to dump him in 197t, has in recent years followed Sadat in realigning himself with the West and moderate Arab countries, and he was one of the first Arab leaders to publicly suppon Sadar's peace initiative. Support Sadal's peace imitative.
Now, bowever, as summer approaches, he has been mending
his fences with his radical neighbors and modifying his policies in an effort to ensure at least a benevolently ocutral attitude toward the Sudan on the part of all—radical and moderate Arabs and Afri-cans—and a maximum degree of domestic solidarity.

Numeiri's early recognition of the survival and gathering triumph of the Mengistu regime in neigh-boring Ethiopia, with Soviet and Cuban aid, caused him to pass from an attitude of support for dissident, pro-Western factions to a gradual rapprochement with Addis Ababa beginning late last year. Even traditional Sudanese support for the Estrange while has been for the Eritrean rebels has been tempered lately with a reluctance to back outright independence for Eritrea. In view of the inability of the two main Eritrean independence groups to forge a union—de-spite Khartoum's urgings—an inde-pendent Eritrea is increasingly viewed as a potential second Ango-la. Moreover, Numeiri could hardly be anxious to antagonize Ethiopia.

cally from (a) deploying neutron bombs, 10 (z) a Third World War fought with nuclear weapons. The point they do not stress is that the impact of that analysis is that the United States should not be prepared effectively to defend Western Europe. That is, we must maintain a force there which is nothing more than a very tempo-rary deterrent: because if we commit an effective deterrent force, the Soviet Union will reply with threats on an IBM mode.

Why doesn't Carter face the consequence of that analysis? Inevitably, its meaning drains into the thinking of Western leaders, causing those suppurations we read Carter's decision, to which his defenders forlornly cling, is one the implications of which they do not sion. IMF Salary Cut

Re the article by Hobart Rowen entitled "400 U.S. IMF Employees Protest Salary-Cut Plan" (IHT. Irrespective of the merits-which

l believe are few—of the overall Treasury Department position to cut all salaries in the lMF, LBRD and Inter-American Bank, I was particularly dismayed to note the reason reported for the Treasury's desire to cut back Americans most. desire to cut back Americans most, namely that U.S. citizens "receive a windfall through a tax-reimbursement system" in effect in these (and other) international agencies. My concern is based upon the fact that either the Treasury or Mr. Rowen, or both, completely misunderstand the so-called "tax-reimbursement system." Thus, for example, the statement that these institutions pay the Americans' taxinstitutions pay the Americans' tax- even tax rebates, must be returned es for them is not correct. The so-called "grossing-up" of salaries to which Mr. Rowen refers consists, in received by the employee, in an amount equal to taxes that be would have been expected to pay if be were employed in the U.S. government or private industry. It is, thus, n "withheld" tax of the same magnitude as would occur if the employee worked in government or industry, the only difference being that the money is all withheld at once, rather than in monthly installments. It is important to note that this amount has nothing to do with the pay comparability issue, which is an entirely separate mat-

Even more important than Mr. Rowen's and the Treasury's misun-derstanding of the above point, however, is their incorrect under-standing of what happens to any tax reimbursement. It is stated that these are returned to the employee. This is not so. All tax reimbursements (if any), and for that matter to the employing organization.

lowering his salary on this basis. If the reported position is the basis for their decision, one can only hope that the Treasury Department will, in the future, do its homework a little better before deciding on policies and initiatives. If, on the other hand, it is not, and in any case, one hopes that Mr. Rowen will similarly be more attentive before reporting and spreading misrstanding.

UN Rights Panel Widening Scope

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.,
April 20 (AP)—The UN Commission on Human Rights has begun to take a more even-handed approach in dealing with humanrights violations in different countries, the commission's U.S. delegate said yesterday. Reporting on a commission meeting in Geneva, Edward Mezvinsky said that the 32-nation group, which has largely confined its probes to Chile, South Africa and the fsraeli-occupied Arab territories, decided to look beyond those targets and deal with alleged human rights violations in Cambo-dia and Cuba, as well as Bolivia, Equatorial Guinea, Ethinpia, Indnnesia, Malawi, South Korea, Paraguay and Uruguay.

Turkish Rivals Clash

Again in Eastern City ISTANBUL, April 20 (AP)-At least two persons were wounded yesterday in the second day of armed conflict among rival political factions in the eastern Turkish city of Malatya, authorities said. The violence followed the pillaging Tuesday of about 400 buildings and burning of 15 more to protest the assassination of the provincial mayor. The state radio announced security forces had rounded up at least 255 persons on suspicion of involvement in the rinting.

Changing Image in U.S. Army

New Sergeant a Leader, Not a Growler

By Bernard Weinraub

FORT BRAGG, N.C., April 20 (NYT)-The old-time Army sergeant, whose bullhorn voice and mean temper turned quavering recruits into warriors, is moving into a new leadership role.

Noncommissioned officers, the ranks from corporal to sergeant major, are assuming broad responsibilities previously held by offi-cers. Moreover, they are plainly stepping away from their established image - a combination of Sgt. Bilko and John Wayne - and are studying increasingly complex bat-tle doctrines and weapons in an Army that seeks to mute rough

"There's been a change, a tre-mendous change in NCOs, because you have a volunteer Army now that's making demands on all of us," said Lt. Gen. Volney Warner, commander of the 18th Airborne

Corps at Fort Bragg. "In the nld days NCOs were almost scorekeepers - they were famous for keeping score on how many pushups you could do, or shiny your boots were. Now we're trying to translate what a shi-oy belt buckle means to something more important." Gen. Warner said. 'We're trying to make NCOs responsible for mission training. we're getting him to exercise genuine authority. We're less concerned about the outward appearance of everything — the superficial aspects - and more concerned about what it takes to make a genuinely

"Hell, I'd rather see a cosonel in a dirty jeep than in a shioy sedan,". said the soft-spoken paratroop offi-cer, standing on a hilltop and watching troops of the 82d Air-borne Division in a battle exercise.

Post-Vietnam Appraisal

What spurred the Army shifts in the role of noncommissioned officers was a series of studies, con-ducted in the early 1970s, designed to evaluate the NCO mle in the Victnam war, as well as how sergeants in the new all-volunteer Army should cope with post-Viet-

"In the old Army most young soldiers weren't married, and the saying was. 'If we want you to have a wife we'll issue you one,' " said Sgt. Maj. Harmon Hodge, a 48-year-old paratrooper who served three combat tours in Vietnam. "Now they're better educated than we were, they're always questioning and asking 'why'. We're into a dif-ferent age, and an NCO has in be far more technically qualified than he's ever been. Society is more technical, more complex. An NCO has got to keep up or else he's not worth his salt,"

At Fort Bragg, for example, NCOs are now responsible for nifle-range practice and safety. for the timing and supervision of mass tactical air drops, for safety in paratrooper "drop zones," and for squad planning and movements in exercises. These responsibilities generally were held by officers

Beyond this, sergeants have been given "maximum flexibility" to car-ry out whatever training their squads need, to exercise authority freely and to spend considerable time motivating and encouraging other enlisted men, instead of shouting orders at them.

Twenty, thirty years ago, NCOs used clout and told young soldiers,
'You do it because I say you do it,
" said Sgt. Hodge. "Now it doesn't work. A soldier knows be's not a robot or a piece of equipment. The NCO knows that be's got to respect

Beckett's Imprisoned Mad Queen

DARIS. April 20 (IHT)—Samuel Beckett's latest play, "Footfalls" ("Pas" in its French version) finds Delphine Seyrig playing a grandiose wreck. Clad in tattered wig, she tramps the boards of the Theatre d'Orsay attering her despair at awaiting the inevitable hour.

Beckett's most recent speculation on existence is, like the weeping and the laughter of Dowson's poem, not long. Nonetheless, dur-ing its brief traffic on the stage—it occupies less than a half hour—it makes an indelible impression.

It is not, in the orthodox sense, a play at all, but rather an inky, strange interlude, a melancholy mood piece, a glimpse at the dark night of the soul. As its beroine trudges her calvary with measured steps, seeming to mark out the sta-tions of her suffering, the voice of her ailing mother speaks, and the thing known as "Histoires" to pre-

Cent ruin, the feminine counterpart of Calderon's captive prince wasting away in a dim dungeon. Ma-deleine Renaud is the invisible mother and both roles are beautifully spoken in this grim lament over the human experience.

Though vocally present, little is seen of Miss Renaud in the evening's course, in which she undertakes another Beckett playlet, "Pas Moi," first done some seasons ago. Only her mouth, magnified, is seen, as in moving tones she recites an impassioned address. Beckett has directed both works and has staged them for the maximum the-atrical impact.

But they would be more fitted to intimate performing space and their ideal place would be in a literary cabaret.

monologue becomes duologue, face the main events. This sorry spectacle claims to have been "inspired" by Beckett themes. For an interminable session, a sextet of the Theatre du Labvrinthe company hurl themselves about in ragged ature as hopeless vagrants living in a desolate rubhish dump. Its staging bears no resemblance to the exacting direction that Beckett has given to his two plays.

In 1959, two undergraduates of the University of Texas, Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, took Rostand's early fantasy. "Les Romanesques," and converted it into a miniature musical. Produced Off-Broadway, it caught favor and ran for 18 years.

The Rostand original is a de-lightful bit of moonlit fooling, itself a sort of opera bouffe. Two fathers anxious for their children to wed, and aware that the course of true love is never smooth, feign to oppose the match. This pretense of disapproval increases the affection of the lovers and, to lend some derring-do to the courtship, the fathers hire strolling players to stage an attempted abduction of the bride-to-be. When the young cou-ple discover the trickery, their ro-mance wanes, but, accepting the disillusionment as part of maturing, they forget their childish dreams and are united.

"The Fantasucks," as the American adaptation is known, may now be sampled in French at the Theatre Campagne Premiere, where it is being engagingly performed. This is the second attempt to introduce it to Parisian audiences, a first try some time ago having failed,

The present production should please. It has a freshness and winning simplicity attuned to the charming text (by Tom Jones) and the melodies (by Harvey Schmidt).

Claude Legendre, done up as a melodrama conspirator, serves as master of ceremonies, confiding to us the secrets of the intrigues, a capital taking of the role, half spoof villain, half puppet manipulator. Oone Hodges is the Juliet heroine, Pierre Reggiani (son of Serge) its Romeo hero and Henri Labussiere and Robert Bazil are comical as the prankish, plotting parents, while Guy Montagne contributes an amusing scene or two as the sea-soned old actor ever ready to go "on." A beguiling sense of inno-cence is the key color to this pas-tiche of the romantic comedies of old, a pleasing blend of Rostand in a light mood and Off-Broadway at

GM Tops Fortune 500 In Magazine's 1977 List

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP)—General Motors recaptured the top spot on Fortune Magazine's prestigious list of the top 500 U.S. corporations, edging out Exxon.

For the previous three years, the oil company topped the list, which ranks companies according to sales. GM overtook Exxon by about $835 million last year, rolling up sales of $54.96 billion against the oil company's $54.13 billion.

The biggest change among the top 20 was Atlantic Richfield's move to 13th from 15th place on sales of $10.97 billion due to revenues from

A laska oil and its purchase of Anaconda.

A newcomer to the "Fortune-500" was DPF Inc., which increased sales 2,122 percent in 1977 from the previous year—the largest jump by any of the corporations. DPF, a $21-million computer-leasing company, which was too small in 1976 to make even the top 1,000 companies, jumped to 418th place with its purchase of a $400-million commercial bakery, Interstate Brands.

Size did oot guarantee success in 1977, however. Twenty-two of the 500 largest corporations lost money last year, compared to 12 the year before. The biggest loser was Bethlehem Steel, ranked 35th, which lost $488 million. Other steelmakers—Lykes, Wheeling-Pittsburgh McLouth and LTV, which owns Jones & Laughlin—also lost money. The oumber of corporations with annual sales of $1 billion or more increased 15 last year to 242. Those with sales of at least $5 billion rose

Mr. Carter told key committee members today that he is con-cerned about what they are doing to his tax proposals, but he apparently got no agreement from them. Committee chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore, said after the White House huddle that nothing had been

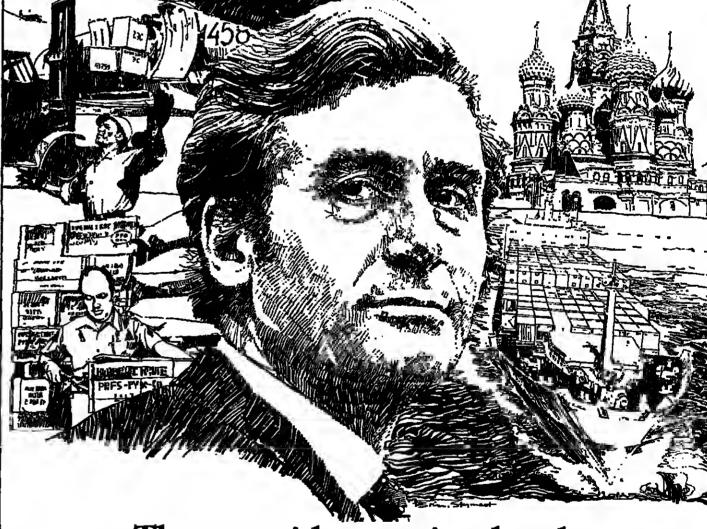

"We assessed the various actions that have been taken to date" on the tax bill, Rep. Ullman told reporters. "I think we all agreed that it's important to get a bill. I think we all agreed that we need some flexibility from now on in putting together the right formula for getting n tax bill...But we came to no final conclusions. We didn't have anything in the way of an agreement,"

He said the President refused to budge from his request for a tax reduction of $25 billion next year. Mr. Ullman wants something under $20 billion in cuts.

The committee is also taking a more modest approach than Mr. Carter would like in attacking tax shelters, White House spokesman Jody Powell said the President's economic advisors still feel that if the cut is not passed the nation faces anything from "a serious pause in the recovery to a recession early next

Mr. Powell said the reports the President received this morning on the prospects of his tax proposals were "not encouraging,"

The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is our policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and bank notes, money market transactions and precious metals.

Geographically, too, we work mainly io areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A. (our U.S. affiliate, Republic National Bank of New York, is now one of America's 60 largest banks). It also includes countries which, frankly, many other banks lack the first-hand knowledge to tackle properly. What's more, we keep our back-office systems running abreast of our business. You don't notice this directly, but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors.

Serving our clients well has helped us grow uncommonly fast. Today, we're big enough to provide most of the sophisticated facilities of the international banking giants but lean enough not to keep you waiting for decisions.

As part of the Trade Development Bank Holding Group ($ 4.2 billion in assets; $ 433.4 million in capital and loan funds employed, as of December 31, 1977), we're ready to serve you in most of the world's financial centers.

Key Group offices: Geneva. London, Paris, New York (Republic National Bank of New York). Other offices in Beirut, Bogora, Buenos Aires, Caracas, Chiasso, Frankfurt, Luxembourg, Mexico City, Montevideo, Nassau, Panama City, Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, Tokyo.

Any bank can lend money. But it takes a big money bank to lend big money.

There are only a handful of such banks in the world, and Security Pacific Bank is one of them. We're one of the ten largest banks in the United States, with assets of more than eighteen billion dollars.

So if you're looking for a big money bank to handle the big share of corporate finance, you should consider Security Pacific Bank.

The big money bank.

PERJURY The Hiss-Chambers Case By Allen Weinstein. Knopf. Illustrated. 674 pages. $15.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

ONE COULD, of course, go on about the role of the typewrit-er in Allen Weinstein's "Perjury," the long-awaited, monumental study of the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers case by the Smith College history professor who successfully sued for access to the FBI's Hiss Chambers records and now heads the Twentieth Century

reads the Twentier Century
Fund's project on access and privacy in Washington.

It is the typewriter — Woodstock
N230099 — that has been the key to a multitude of conspiracy theo-ries that seek to explain how Whit-taker Chambers, the putatively "psychopathic" former Communist spy, went about framing Alger Hiss, the New Deal's straightest

And Weinstein not only seems to knock askew all such conspiracy theories, he also appears to demon-strate that if anyone was playing deceptive games with the typewriter, it was not the FBI or the House Un-American Activities Committee or Whittaker Chambers, but rather Alger Hiss himself, along with his prother. Donald.

Or one could discuss the notes written in Hiss's hand, which Chambers claimed Hiss had given him along with the many pages of government documents retyped on the Woodstock N230099, and which. Weinstein tries to persuade us with a welter of evidence, were oot copied out in Hiss's normal line of duty at the State Department, Or the Bokharn rug that Cham-bers said he passed on to Hiss as a token of Soviet military intelligence's gratitude for services ren-

Or the old Ford automobile that Chambers said Hiss had presented as a gift "to the open [Communist] party so it could be of use to some organizer in the West or somewhere."

One could expatiate at length on what Weinstein has to say about any one of these now familiar subjects or a dozen other less familiar ones, for that matter.

But it all boils down to the same thing. At almost every point in Weinstein's hugely detailed scruti-ny of the case, it is Whittaker Chambers who seems plausible and lucid in his behavior, and Alger Hiss who seems devicus and

And we are not referring just to the public record of the two perjury trials, the first of which led to a hung jury and the second of which resulted in Hiss's conviction.

We are referring to thousands of new items of information culled from formerly classified records of the Office of Strategic Services, the CIA, the State and Justice Depart-ments: from the Hiss legal-defense files, which have gone un being supplemented up to the present day, and from dozens of personal interviews conducted by Weinstein.

And all of this information adds up to a far more damaging case against Hiss than even the trial prosecutor who brought about his conviction was able to present.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

So the tables appear to be turned. Well, not precisely turned — since Weinstein, in his seeming scrupulosity to be fair, is almost as hard on Richard Nixon as he is on Alger Hiss, thus disrupting the case's careful symmetry, which has been perceived as a war between the left and right for America's

But it is now Hiss who appears inexplicable and Chambers whose every move seems understandable and consistent with his character. It is now Chambers who apparently can rest on his reputation (however controversial it may remaint and Hiss whose hurden it is to dispel the mystery.
Naturally, this leaves us with a snarl of questions. To mention only the most obvious: If Hiss did pass documents to Chambers, which, if Weinstein is right, we must assume he did (and, contrary to a widespread impression, those docu-ments contained material of con-siderable interest to the Russians. then how much deeper in espionage activities was Hiss involved, and how much longer after Chambers broke with the party did his involvement continue?

And most important of all: Why has he contiqued in the face of such damaging evidence to seek exoneration and to involve in his quest the reputations of so many distin-guished friends and colleagues?

He merely wants, he says, to present and analyze as fairly as he knows how the exhaustive record he has pulled together. Still, he throws out hints.

On the question of the duration Hiss's involvement: he shows that Hiss could have been looking out for Soviet interests all the way up through the time when he served as temporary secretary general of the United Nations organizing con-ference at San Francisco in 1945, and that there has even been "in-formed hearsay" evidence from "the other side" to support such a possibility.

As to why Hiss has continued to hold out: Weinstein supplies us with a number of clues. He points out that espionage agents had to cultivate a split personality—what Klaus Fuchs once described a controlled schizophrenia"—in or der to maintain their cover.

He reminds us that in the historical context of the 1930s, when many intelligent and hemorable Americans saw no disloyalty to their country in the act of joining the Russian fight against Fascism it did not seem the sin to spy for the Soviet Union that subscensed historical contexts have made i

> So why, one might conclude (a), though Weinstein himself neve to does), should we have expected Hiss to have his secrets when they were least likely to be understoon. and forgiven!

Weinstein describes in his conclud ing chapters how our perceptions of the case have been reshaped by the Cold War and by Walergate how Hiss first came to be seen as at symbol of the evil that a good Nix, on was fighting, and then, in a dramatic turnabout, he became the good that an evil Nixon was con spiring against.

Could it be, we are led to specu late, that Hiss, too, came to see himself as a symbol and has simply been waiting for history to vind: cate that symbol as it very nearlhas in recent years?

BRIDGE.

Players who like to experiment with psychic opening bids, confus-ing their own partners rather more than the opponents, rarely consider the converse form of operation: A psychic pass with a hand worth an opening.
This is rather safer than the psy-chie opening with inadequate values because it does not provoke one's partner to disastrous actions. The danger of a psychic pass with opening values is that there may be no hidding at all. This is a real possibility with a balanced hand, but is quite remote with freakish distribution. When South ventured to pass on the diagramed deal with a hand that clearly justified a hid of one, four or five clubs he could be fairly confident that comebody would bid. The average strength of the other three hands were nine points, and at least one player had to have a singleton or void club.

and two passes followed. South knew quite a lot about the hand. His opponents were playing a strong-club system, so West was limited to about 16 points and East was known to be weak. So North

Montreal Coach Blames 'Carelessness'

Red Wings Win 2d Playoff Game Against Canadiens

MONTREAL, April 20 (UPI)— The question is whether the Red Wings have only succeeded in riling Montreal, or whether they really can win this series and author the most stunning upset in Stanley Cup

"Everyone said the Canadiens would sweep this series," Detroit Coach Bobby Kromm said yester-day after the Red Wings defeated the defending Stanley Cup champions, 4-2. "I know they can be had. And the players know it too." Kromm inherited a team that finished last in the NHL last year.

Now he's taking road games from a team that usually wins everything except the Kentucky Derby. "Montreal is a great skating team," Kromm said. "But we showed a lot of improvement over the first game." The victory came in the Montreal Forum, where Detroit had not won since March 20, 1974. The best-of-seven series is tied at one game each, with the third and fourth games scheduled for Detroit. "Things like that don't usually happen to us in the Forum," said Detroit goalie Jim Rutherford.

"Now we're going home with a victory and we usually play better in front of our own fans."

The Red Wings held Montreal scoreless for one period, just as they did in Monday's 6-2 loss. Then the Canadiens rallied, as they did Monday. The Red Wings, however, rallied back. That didn't happen Monday.

"When you're down 2-0, you're never out of the game. That's what hockey is all about," said Kromm. Larry Robinson and Yvan Cournoyer scored for Montreal. But Dale McCourt, the Red Wings' No. I amateur draft pick last season, beat goalie Ken Dryden twice in the final two minutes of the second period.

"I got two good shots away and I was lucky to beat Dryden," McCourt said.

When we got up 2-0 we started to get careless and I guess that was our downfall," said Moutreal coach Scotty Bowman. "We missed a lot of empty nets and hit the goalpost four times, but I'm not worried. Three years ago we also lost the second game of the series right here against Vancouver and then came back to take the next three."

Errol Thompson scored the winner 22 seconds into the third period. "I just picked the puck and shot it quickly," Thompson said. "I guess it's the law of averages that if you get nine shots in the game one is bound to go in."

ended up spending 16 years in the minors."

There were 16 undistinguished years in the minors, along with stints as a car salesman and a construction worker. But for the last four seasons, Cherry has been big time as coach of the Boston Bruins.

"If I hadn't gotten laid off construction work, I'd probably still be doing it," said Cherry. "I was a laborer — the jackhammer was my specinlty; I'll always have a special fondness for the gnys with the jackhammers. But essentially, it was through the necessity of my family eating that I got into coaching.

Emphasis on Fun

For the Bruins - a mixture of draft choices, castoffs and veterans the work ethic is their motto and Cherry is their foreman. "It's gotta he fun," he said. "If you don't make it fun, if you're on their

Nets, NBA Orphan, Endure More Woes

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, April 20 (AP)-There was an ironic twist to a couple of stories in U.S. newspapers this week. Out of Piscataway, N.J., came a report that two paychecks made out to members of the New Jersey Nets had bounced because of insufficient funds. Prodded, the Nets made them good on Monday.

Just another in the miseries of the National Basketball Association's orphaned franchise

Across the Hudson River, in Uniondale, N.Y., fans crammed the Nas-sau Coliseum to watch the Islanders, rated the second best team in the National Hockey League, pursue their bid for the Stanley Cup. The Islanders radiated confidence and class.

The Nets and Islanders: blood brothers, both owned by sports entrepreneur Roy Boe, yet as much alike as the hrothers in the Bihlical parable — the one who took his stake and squandered it an riotous living, the other who stayed home and faithfully performed his duties.

No Regrets

Does Boe have trouble reconciling himself with his "Prodigat Son?" "Nat in the least," says the lean, 47-year-old Ivy Leaguer who sacrificed his own athletic talents to pursue a business career. "The Nets gave us a lot of thrills as champions of the American Basketball Association. Now, in the NBA, we are undergoing some heartaches.

"We have lost money every year since 1969 [a reported $7 million]. We have been beleaguered with law suits. We don't have a permanent home. Twice we have built a team from virtual scratch and we are in the process of doing so again.

"But I have no favnritism, although the Islanders are making money and the Nets are losing it. During the season I think I saw as many Nets games as Islanders games.

While the Islanders have remained firm at their Nassau Cottseum base, playing almost every game before a sellout crowd of 15,317 far a season total of close to 700,000, the Nets have been roving, unloved and unappre-

They have moved from the ABA to the NBA, from Commack to Hempstead in Uniondale on Long Island in Piscataway, where they have been playing in Rutgers University's cramped gym pending construction of a permanent home in the Meadowlands complex in New Jersey.

They finished last in their NBA division with a 24-58 record, once losing 16 games in a row. Their average attendance for the 1977-78 campaign was 5,647 a game.

With pro basketball salaries averaging $100,000 a year, such an operation looks like a ticket to the poor house. Boe's husiness practices have come under attack from players, associates and rival owners. "I am impulsive — I make snap decisions." he says. "hut I've paid off every contract. I've kept my word. After huilding the Nets into a team that won ABA champtonships in 1974 and 1976, he became involved in salary disputes with Julius (Dr. J. Erving. He traded his star to the Philadelphia 76ers [nr $2.5 million and proceeded to discard other members of the successful team. Law suits resulted from a decision to desert Long Island for New Jersey. Boe, a graduate of Yale University, joined his father in the food husiness, then hranched out to promote a basement fahric shop into a dress enterprise which he sold for several million dollars.

In 1968, he paid $50,000 for the Westchester Bulls of the defunct Atlantic Coast Football League, and moved the team to Long Island. In 1969, he and eight friends paid $1 million for the floundering Nets of the ABA. Three years later he headed a syndicate that bought the expansion Islander franchise of the NHL, paying $6 million to the league and $4 million to the Rangers for territorial rights.

"I am now a sports franchiser," he said, "It's a husiness, not a hobby with me. I get great satisfaction out of winning, nut of artistic success, From a financial standpoint, with escalating salaries and problems, it is tough. I wouldn't recommend it."

I do not refer O Vanessa Redgrave, who shocked everybody else by de veloping an eerie

What was truly disconcerting. what was devastating-well, how can I say it? Bob Hope, Kirk Douglas, Bette Davis, Barbara Stanwyck, Janet Gaynor, the whole glorious gang of them.

At that time I was a child and they were grown up. But then, of course, time passed, as time is supposed to do, and one day I walked in front of the mirror and was startled. My Lucky Lindy cap was gone and, what was worse, so was I. Instead of me staring back out of that mirror, there was somebody who looked like Wallace Beery. Or possibly Walter Brennan. I mean this character was OLD.

Oh, you could tell they had some years on them but there was scarcely one of them who didn't look 10 years my junior. And I am not exactly a geezer yet. But these people should have been geezers if they had been using the same calendar everybody else uses. And yet they weren't.

Now and then an authentic lifehewn face did appear, and it was exhilarating. Fred Astaire came with his own wrinkles, and I wanted to applaud. William Holden came looking like a man who had made the usual excursions into life and been affected by them much the way most of us are. Which is to say, he looked interesting instead of preserved,

Three years ago, after an exhibition at the Grand Palars in Paris, he burned all the canvases that were shown in a gesture which he described as a rebellion against the "art business." He explained with a blow on a table, "Paintings are not doi!ars. The works I set on fire were of great plastic beauty, but so was the color of the fire—those yellows, those other reds, the blacks and grays of the asbes...beantiful and transient. I decided they were not meant for museum walls and collectors."

The burning of his works seemed perfectly normal to Miro, an intensely independent artist who has all his life despised "labels"—political as well as artistic.

He resents "gratuitous" descriptions of his complicated paintings as "infantile" forms. Childhood, he said, has no content.
"The world is what my painting is about," be said, pointing to a workshop," he remarked. "Studio is too intellectual."

A close friend of the late Pablo Picasso, Miro is the antithesis of his great Spanish contemporary. "Picasso was representanonal," Miro said, "I am not. My figures are providential. He opened many doors for me, and once he told me that my name came from the verb to see—the past, the present. I told him his name meant stonecutter—clunk, clunk, clunk."

On an easel was a painting that looked like a Picasso bull. "No. no." said Miro. "That's a personage—a woman, a witch."

"What interests me is purity of spirit in my work," he said, leaning on a table that had a poster with the inscription, "Miro.

He bas never painted anything erotic. "For me, sex, the act of love, is a sacred ritual," he said. "It was different with Picasso, He had an animal force, a different vitality." Miro is not concerned about being in museums and in learning who buys and who collects his works, and what they pay. Still, he is a rich man, perhaps worth hetween $5 million and $6 million.

Influence of Poetry

The biggest influence on his work, and his approach, has been poetry. Among the poets are the French surrealists, whom he men in Paris, and such Spanisb poets as Frederico Garcia Lorca, killed by Franco sympathizers early in the Spanish Civil War. "You will find his enormous eyes in some of my canvases," he said. Like Picasso, Miro opposed the late dictator Francisco Franco and supported the Republic during the 1936-39 Civil War. In 1937, when Picasso was painting "Guernica" to denounce the brutal air raids that destroyed the Basque city, Miro did his famous "Aidez l'Espagne" poster, which shows a man raising his fist in defiance.

Miro, who wanted to leave France and go to the United States with his wife, Pilar, and infant daughter. Dolores, could not find a berth on a boat. They decided to ahandon France ahead of the invading German Army and return to Catalonia—"the mots of my work, my inspiration." Their luggage consisted of a folder with watercolors called "Constellations."

He was afraid that he would be arrested by Franco's Guardia Civil at the border because of his defense of the Republic, but nothing happened, and he preferred living in Palma to exile. He recalled visiting Picasso, who refused to return to Spain while Franco was alive, on the French Riviera. "I told him his house. La Californie, was beautiful...the garden, the trees," Miro said. "He picked up - ebble and replied, 'A stone of Catalonia is worth more than au this."

He is intensely, passionately Catalanist, and wants the region to obtain full self-rule. Adamant about using the Catalan language, Miso refuses to answer letters in Spanish from Catalans. He painted a strong poster calling for autonomy called "Volem Statut" (We Want the Autonomy Statute), and helps Catalan artists who want to develop Catalan themes.

Sculpture for Chicago

Miro's current work load would be staggering for anybody half his age. He is working on a major sculpture to go up in Chicago next to one by Picasso, be is doing ceramic murals for Barcelona and a large tapestry called "Women, Birds, Stars," due to be displayed soon in Washington's National Gallery. He also is preparing exhibitions of his works in Paris. Madrid and New York.

The venerable painter's pet project, however, is the Miro Foundation Museum in Barcelona, an institution dedicated to the arts, literature, films and drama, and which seeks to involve young people in experimental projects. He regards the museum as a contribution to "the permanent revolution to open minds and to free spirits.

The foundation, extablished by Miro in 1971, won a special Council of Europe award last year for "...contribution to the creation of a new concept of a museum as a cultural center."

The museum was designed by Josep Luis Prats, the Catalan architect who fled to the United States after the Civil War and became dean of architecture at Harvard. An old Miro friend and admirer, Prats also created Miro's commodious workshop,

"Despite everything," he said, "I am optimistic. The 40 years of Franco's dictatorship are a nightmare, but he never could put out the fire of the Catalan people—of the Spanish people. The sears are there, but I have bope because he did not choke the Catalan vitality, which has contributed so much to Spain, to Europe, to the British thione, tangled his parachuic lines in a jump at South Cer-ncy. England, but landed safely. "I'm off to do another one now," said the livear-old prince after he landed. An hour and a half later he made his second jump of the day without problem. They were Prince Andrew's fifth and sixth jumps in a series of seven he must do to win his paracoure certificate. Overeast weather has hampered him through much of his two-week training.

Ehis Prestey wanted to work as an undercover narcotics agent for the federal government and discussed the matter with Richard Nixon during a White House visit, a close friend of the late singer says. Marty Lacker, who was best man at Presley's wedding, recalls the incident in his forthcoming book, "Elvis: Portrait of a Friend." excerpts of which appear in the May issue of Ladies Home Jour-nal. Lacker says that Presley surprised his enjourage by taking a secret trip to Washington in 1970. Lacker said that nothing came of Presley's offer.

The Swedish Parliament has voted to give king Carl Gustaf's baby daughter, Princess Victoria, the right to inherit the throne, a move which would overturn the nation's laws limiting succession to males. The decision must be approved again by Parliament after the next general election, scheduled for September, 1979, before it passes into law.

Financier Bernard Cornfeld said in Los Angeles that his place in history has been assured by his conviction for cheating the Pacific Telephone Co. But as a result, for the next three months his place will be in prison. U.S. District Judge Matt Byrne has ordered Cornfeld, 48, to begin serving his prison term on May 8. Cornfeld was convicted in August, 1976, on three counts of cheating the telephone company by using "blue boxes"—devices used for making free long-distance calls,

Jill Brown of Baltimore has received her flight wings from Tex-as International Airlines, which made her the first black woman who is known to have qualified as a pilot for a major United States air-line. Miss Brown, 27, began flying as a teen-ager and later became a pilot for a local airline in North Ca-rolina before becoming a first offi-cer on Texas International planes. She has been promoted to the rank of co-pilot.

The two Texas senators, Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, and John Towers, a Republican, have begun efforts to get an honorable dis-charge for Calvin Graham of Fort Worth, who lied about his age and joined the Navy in 1942, when he was 12 years old, and later became known as "the baby vet." Graham was a gunner at the battles of Guadaleanal and Santa Cruz and won three medals before the Navy learned his true age, revoked the medals and his service record and jailed him for three months. Graham, now 48 and crippled by arthritis, told an interviewer in Fort Worth that the discharge program for Vietnam war deserters had giv-en him hope of getting bis dis-charge. He said he "damn sure" deserved one more than a deserter -SAMUEL JUSTICE.
